AN INVESTORS GUIDE TO THE

2014 ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

TENTATIVE SIGNS OF ECONOMIC GROWTH – SO WHAT DO I DO WITH MY MONEY?

INVESTORS GUIDE TO THE 2014 ECONOMIC OUTLOOK INVESTORS GUIDE TO THE 2014 ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

INVESTORS GUIDE TO THE 2014 ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

Tentative signs of economic growth – so what do I do with my money?

In this guide we provide insights on a range of topics from equities to emerging markets and consider what it means for investors' portfolios. Nobody has a crystal ball, but analysts expect the investment outlook for 2014 to be characterised by a move towards financial markets standing on their own feet, as the global policy support that has provided abundant liquidity to markets starts to be withdrawn. This should mark an important change in the drivers of investment returns.

Instead of liquidity, corporate earnings are expected to move into the spotlight and drive equity performance. The gap between equity and fixed income valuations will continue to normalise as bond yields rise and corporate credit is likely to outperform sovereign debt. Emerging markets are likely to remain volatile

Following many years of liquidity provision from the world's central banks which supported the performance of risk assets, 2014 is expected to see the global economic recovery put to the test. Financial markets will have to re-engage with reality against a backdrop of significant macro and policy challenges, meaning that investors need to be aware of the consequences of a changing environment and subsequent volatility. What happens if quantitative easing (QE) is withdrawn too quickly? What risks lie ahead if companies do not deliver earnings growth?

EQUITIES

Regional and sector performance is expected to vary in relation to a bullish equities market. Investors are expected to increasingly shift their focus away from market liquidity to company fundamentals following the US Federal Reserve's announcement last September that it is preparing to taper QE. Companies will have to step up their game and earnings will have to pick up if equities are to come close to matching the rally seen in developed markets during 2013.

US company earnings have been robust, having recovered and surpassed their previous peak. US equities are expected to remain THE REGION OF attractive. The banking sector is well capitalised and has started lending again, providing a boost to the economy. While the debt ceiling remains a risk, a combination of low energy and labour costs should support company margins in 2014. Analysts forecast the best performers will be companies in the technology and consumer discretionary sectors.

GDP GROWTH

COULD BE IN

THIS YEAR

In contrast, only half of European companies were able to beat earnings expectations in 2013. The region remains beset by relatively poor growth dynamics compared with the rest of the developed world. The stock market recovery seen in 2013 could easily herald a false dawn. The banking sector still has a long way to travel to address its capital shortage, although the fundamentals are much improved. While Europe is likely to return to positive GDP growth in 2014, earnings growth is likely to be steady rather than dramatic. Stock pickers, however. could be handsomely rewarded when concentrating on companies with strong business models, robust finances, experienced managements and, ideally, dominant market positions.

While the UK economy is still smaller than it was pre-crisis, there was some very encouraging data in 2013 and GDP growth could be in the region of 2% this year. Unemployment has been falling faster than the Bank of England expectations. The problem is that the positive data has not necessarily translated into domestic profits thus far. On the upside. there has been a pickup in IPO activity and the expected improved economic backdrop should further drive corporate confidence and

GDP growth in Brazil is unlikely to look spectacular compared to the developed world.

are expected to move gradually upwards, with the 10-year US treasury yield at around 3.5% by the end of 2014. While we may not witness a return to the historic norms just yet, the gap between equity and bond yields should slowly start to normalise, so the 'risk-on' stance that has worked well for investors during the last few years should become less glaring in 2014. In fact, corporate credit is an asset built for a slow growth environment and we continue to prefer it over sovereign debt. High yield in particular had a good 2013 and European high yield has benefited from its non-dollar and short duration characteristics. Company balance sheets are robust and analysts see defaults as very unlikely.

In sovereign markets, yields

EMERGING MARKETS

Emerging markets are a mixed bag and a potential wildcard in 2014. The announcement of QE tapering has caused significant headwinds in fixed income assets and concerns over currency volatility and current account deficits remain. Emerging market equity valuations are attractive, but history shows that rising US treasury yields and a stronger US dollar can have a negative impact on returns. In addition, GDP growth in countries such as Brazil is unlikely to look spectacular compared to the developed world. On the upside, Mexico should benefit from solid growth linked to the US economic recovery and the country's lower manufacturing cost base compared to China. While the latter has impressed with its recent policy announcements, stock picking is likely to be of particular importance over the next few years. Equally, domestic markets in Latin America and those emerging market companies that are geared to an economic recovery in the developed world should not be dismissed.

COMMERCIAL PROPERTY

Analysts expect the UK commercial property market to make further headway in 2014 as the economic recovery continues to have a positive impact on occupational demand. The main beneficiaries should be the South East, as well as logistics and warehousing markets across the country. Top provincial office markets are also showing some signs of recovery. This is likely to attract investors to commercial property this year and competition for stock should place upward pressure on capital value.

The views expressed do not constitute investment advice. No liability is accepted to recipients acting ntly on its contents. The value of investments and any income from them can go down as well as up meaning that investors could get back less than they originally invested changes in currency exchange rates, are held or where investments are converted from one currency to any investments held should be viewed as a medium to long-term investment, at least five vears. Investments in emerging markets are by their nature higher risk and potentially more volatile than those inherent in established markets. Past performance should not be seen as an indication of future returns activity in 2014. Analysts forecast that the best returns are likely to come from industrials and the consumer discretionary sector, with consumption (and housing) having driven the economic recovery to date. However, relatively little economic rebalancing has taken place (something that has been exacerbated by the success of the 'Help to Buy' scheme) and raises questions over the sustainability of the recovery. Japan has embarked on a clear and credible path, and 'Abenomics' has been transformative. According to the Japanese Ministry of Labour and Welfare survey (2013), low interest rates support credit growth and 80% of companies are set to raise base salaries. More challenges lie ahead but analysts expect further gains in equities and are overweight in financials and beneficiaries of policy action.

03

FIXED INCOME

2014 is likely to be a year of transition for bonds. The expectation of QE tapering has already led to the end of the bond market rally, although analysts say there is no evidence for a rotation out of the asset class as demand from pension funds and banks remains.

02

HOW DO YOU LIKE TO MAKE INVESTMENT DECISIONS?

No matter how you like to invest or how your needs change over time, we offer investment help and guidance that's right for you. To discuss your requirements, whether you are investing for income, growth or both, please contact us to see how we can help you achieve your investment goals. We look forward to hearing from you.

The Financial Conduct Authority does not regulate taxation & trust advice or will writing. This guide only explains how trusts work in England and Wales; it does not cover trust law in Scotland or Northern Ireland. We recommend you take professional advice before setting up a trust. The content of this guide is for your general information and use only, and is not intended to address your particular requirements. The content should not be relied upon in its entirety and shall not be deemed to be, or constitute, advice. Although endeavours have been made to provide accurate and timely information, there can be no guarantee that such information is accurate as of the date it is received or that it will continue to be accurate in the future. No individual or company should act upon such information without receiving appropriate professional advice after a thorough examination of their particular situation. We cannot accept responsibility for any loss as a result of acts or omissions taken in respect of the content. Thresholds, percentage rates and tax legislation may change in subsequent Finance Acts. Levels and bases of reliefs from taxation are subject to change, and their value depends on an individual's personal circumstances.

