Guidance from HMRC on the new Seed Investment Scheme (SEIS)

This new, heavily tax based investment opportunity is attracting plenty of attention. This is hardly surprising considering that the scheme offers income tax relief at a fixed 50%, plus capital gains tax exemption if you reinvest the amount of the gain into an SEIS investment.

We can advise prospective investors and companies looking for funding, and we have now received useful guidance from HMRC to help ensure that the requirements for tax relief are met. As you can imagine (given the size of the tax breaks), important conditions need to be met and great care is needed when considering any SEIS investment.

If a company wants to raise funds via SEIS, we can contact HMRC to ask whether the company's line of business qualifies (as not all of them do unfortunately). A company can raise a maximum of £150,000 for a new trade, and an investor can own a maximum of 30% of the shares (including those owned by some relatives and other people connected with them).

The Real Time Information system for PAYE

This revolutionary development in the PAYE system will involve many fundamental changes. If you do your own payroll you need to be up to speed with what RTI is all about.

For every occasion that an employee is paid, the details must be reported to HMRC. The idea is that it will make it much easier to ensure the right amount of tax and national insurance is paid at the right time. This in turn will reduce the need for end-of-tax-year reconciliations.

Cynics argue that the new system is coming in so that the new universal credit benefit system (due in October 2013) will work from up-to-date earnings information. RTI should give cost savings to employers in due course, but there will be initial costs of switching to the new scheme. Payrolls for domestic staff will no longer be able to use a simplified scheme, meaning extra complications. Moreover, an employee paid less than the lower earnings level (so no NICs) must have their earnings reported, unlike under the current system.

Savings in completing forms will arise, as no annual form P35 or P14s will be needed, but forms P60 and P11D will still be with us.

All employers will have to switch to RTI by October 2013, but most will be able to do so by April 2013. Now is the time to address the issue by reference to your own circumstances, unless we handle your entire payroll for you. If you are what the EU calls a "micro employer", meaning that you have less than 10 staff, you will have to use RTI without any concessions to reflect the number of employees in the business.

Monthly Update

New HMRC tracker service

If you are an employee, or you pay tax on a company pension through PAYE, you can use the new HMRC tracker service to check how long it will take HMRC to:

- pay your income tax refund
- reply to your general income tax enquiry
- provide a copy of individual information, such as your tax code or pay and tax details
- send you HMRC forms or stationery

Whilst as your agent we will normally use this tracker system on your behalf and for our mutual benefit, you can use it yourself where you have been in touch with HMRC direct.

Patent box tax reliefs

Following the launch of the patent box, HMRC have published a guide advising UK companies about how they can pay less tax on profits generated from their patented inventions. From April 2013, any profits from inventions that are protected by a UK patent will be taxable at a significantly lower rate of corporation tax. The relief will be phased in from April 2013, starting at around 15% and falling to 10% by 2017.

In order to receive the tax break, companies must own or exclusively license-in the patents and must have undertaken qualifying development on them. The much-publicised rate of 10% will not actually apply until 2017. Instead, the tax rate that will apply to qualifying profits in the coming financial year will be 15.2%. The tax reduction will be tapered, so the 10% rate will only apply to 60% of the qualifying profits in 2013/14, rising to the full 100% of profits in 2017. Whilst clearly of limited interest to many companies, the size of the tax relief means that all opportunities need to be properly identified.

Child Benefit changes for Higher Earners

The Government has announced how Child Benefit will be withdrawn for high earners.

There are changes to the original proposals and possible chaos in the making as Child Benefit payments will be clawed back from the highest earner in a household by an annual income tax charge - Instead of a reduction in payments to the carer.

How it affects you

/ If either you or your partner earn over £60,000 you will lose child benefit in full.

/ If both you and your partner earn under £50,000 a year you will keep all of your child benefit payments.

/ If you or your partner earn between £50,000 and £60,000 you will lose 1% of your child benefit payments for every £100 you earn above the £50,000 threshold

E.g. You earn £55,000 you will lose 50% of your child benefit.

/ If both you and your partner earn over £50,000, the additional Income Tax charge will be applied to whoever earns the most, regardless of who the child benefit is paid to.

Important to know.... Your child benefit payment will NOT stop!!!

Even if you earn over the £60,000 threshold (therefore losing your child benefit in full) the primary carer will continue to receive payment as normal.

The Government will then take the equivalent value back through an additional Income Tax charge from the higher earner – collected either via the self assessment tax return or the PAYE code (for those in employment).

When do the changes come into force?

The changes will be implemented on 7th January, 2013. HMRC will write to all taxpayers who are potentially affected with further guidance in the coming weeks.

How can I keep as much child benefit payment as possible?

By reducing your taxable income!! There is not a 'one size fits all approach' to this, but there are a number of ways we can help, so contact us to discuss your situation and how we can help you.
